"Touched by Polio" Art Exhibition Online

The "Touched by Polio ~ from casts to catharsis" art exhibition can be viewed online at www.polio.org.au

Full surround photos and videos of the art works are displayed, and bids can be made for any of the art works not sold at the launch.

Read more about the artists, how they have been touched by polio, and follow the links to their other art works.

Photos and videos can also be viewed of the wonderful orthotic and prosthetic staff and students at La Trobe University who donated the material and volunteered their time to create the casts: Stephanie Barnard and Anthony Francis (Lecturers); Angela Buller; Kamini Balachandran; Kristaal Grant; Michael Heskes; Hannah Owsianka; and Lucy Viola.

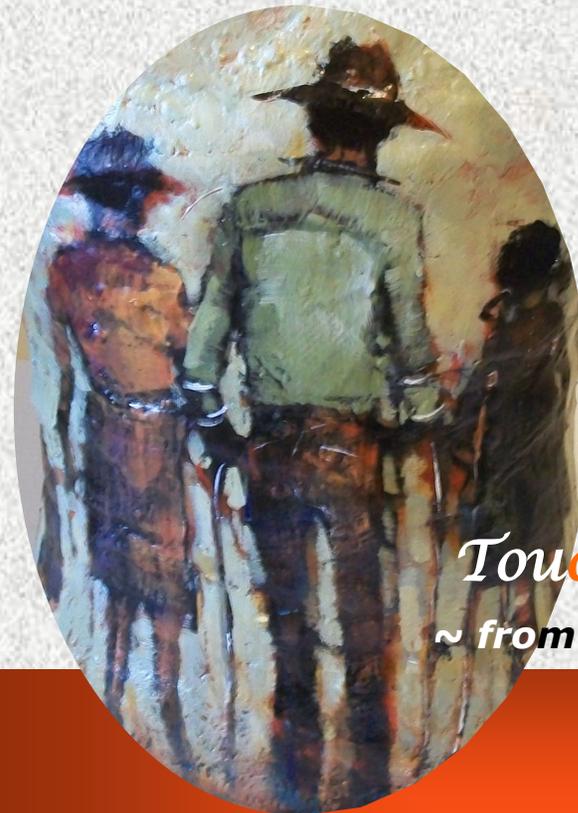

And watch their delightful children: James and Tommy Barnard; Noah Francis; and Amy and Adam Viola; who offered up their limbs as moulds for the leg casts.

“Once-upon-a-time tens of thousands of Australian children contracted polio, recovered, got on with their lives (some even became artists!), and they all lived happily ever after.”

~ The End ~

Or not . . . This exhibition tells a myriad stories through thirty-five ‘artified’ leg and torso plaster casts.

Many polio survivors have vivid memories of wearing plaster casts to keep their limbs from becoming deformed during recovery and rehabilitation.

Twenty-four artists who have been ‘touched by polio’ in some way - survivors, family, friends - have contributed to the exhibition.

This was quite a ‘cathartic’ experience for some as they relived the pain of polio infection and a broken childhood.

Following decades of striving to be normal, these ‘polio children’ are now in their 50’s or older, and experiencing the often debilitating Late Effects of Polio, plunging them back into a life filled with daily pain and increasing muscle weakness. A key problem is that there are very few health professionals who know about the Late Effects, leaving Australia’s polio survivors without appropriate diagnosis or management strategies. Rectifying this situation is the focus of Polio Australia.

As Polio Australia receives no government or any other recurrent funding, the “Touched by Polio” exhibition art works have been generously donated by the artists for auction/sale, with all proceeds going to assist Polio Australia in continuing our work.
